Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking Statement 2020

This statement has been published in accordance with the UK Modern Slavery Act (2015), the California Transparency in Supply Chains Act of 2010 (SB 657) and the Australian Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cth). It sets out the steps that PUMA SE and all its subsidiaries (herein after referred to as PUMA) have taken during the financial year 2020 to identify the risks of and prevent modern slavery and human trafficking occurring in its own business operations and supply chains.

Structure, Business and Supply Chain

PUMA is one of the world’s leading sports brands, designing, developing, selling and marketing footwear, apparel and accessories. For 70 years, PUMA has been producing the most innovative products for the fastest athletes on the planet. PUMA offers performance and sport style footwear, apparel and accessories products in categories such as Football, Running and Training, Golf, Motorsports and Basketball. PUMA engages in exciting collaborations with renowned designers to bring innovative and fast designs to the sports world. The PUMA Group owns the brands PUMA and COBRA Golf as well the subsidiary Stichd. PUMA distributes its products in more than 120 countries via the wholesale and retail trade, as well as from sales directly to consumers in our own retail stores and online stores. We market and distribute our products worldwide primarily via our own subsidiaries. There are distribution agreements in place with independent distributors in a small number of countries. PUMA employs more than 13,000 people worldwide and the headquarters are located in Herzogenaurach, Germany. As of December 31, 2020, 101 subsidiaries were controlled directly or indirectly by PUMA SE. Our subsidiaries carry out various tasks at the local level, such as distribution, marketing, product development, sourcing and administration.

Social, economic and environmental sustainability is a core value for PUMA. As a long-term signatory to the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals. We aim to bring our trading practices in line with the principles of the UN Global Compact and ensure that our products are manufactured in workplaces, where Human Rights are respected.

We recognize the importance for transparency in our supply chain and publish the list of our core manufacturers (Tier 1) and core component and material suppliers (Tier 2). This list can be found on PUMA’s website under Sustainability/Social. The PUMA global core factory list, includes suppliers that stand for 80% of the sourcing volume of our apparel, footwear, and accessories divisions. PUMA’s suppliers are located all around the world. Asia remains the strongest sourcing region overall with Vietnam (35%) and China (26%) as our main sourcing countries. The core factory list contains the name, address and tier-level of each factory as well as information on the type of product being processed and the number of employed workers. During the financial year 2020, PUMA sourced from 139 independent suppliers in 31 countries worldwide.

Further information about PUMA, its organizational structure and group relationships is available on the company’s website under PUMA at a Glance and under Financial Reports [cf. PUMA’s Annual Report 2020].

Policies on Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking

PUMA respects the ILO Core Conventions, the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the ten principles of the United Nations Global Compact. These standards are the foundation for PUMA’s labor-related policies. PUMA’s Code of Ethics is the basic framework for the behavior of all PUMA employees including employees of joint ventures, customers and suppliers.

The Code of Ethics is mandatory and extends to every individual working for or on behalf of PUMA. It determines PUMA’s commitment to ethical and responsible individual and corporate behavior and requires everyone to comply with legal requirements at all times. Our commitment to identify and address issues such as modern slavery, human trafficking and forced labor is also integrated in PUMA’s Code of Conduct that, in addition to the Code of Ethics, all our vendors and their subcontractors are required to fully respect. The Code of Conduct forms an essential part of our purchasing contracts. Introduced back in 1993, PUMA’s Code of Conduct sets a clear minimum standard for supply chain partners, is translated into forty-one languages and is displayed in all of PUMA’s directly contracted partner factories. PUMA’s Code of Conduct was revised to meet or exceed the Fair Labor Association’s Workplace Code of Conduct in 2016. It stipulates very clearly:

DIGNITY AND RESPECT - Harassment, corporal punishment and physical, sexual, psychological or verbal abuse is not tolerated in the PUMA supply chain. Vendors and their subcontractors cannot use any form of forced labor including prison labor, indentured labor or bonded labor.

Our compliance requirements covering responsible recruitment, freedom of association and collective bargaining, prohibition of forced labor, bonded labor, child labor and human trafficking are also detailed in our PUMA Sustainability Handbook - Social Standards. This handbook is available on our website and distributed to all our vendors and their subcontractors to illustrate our mandatory Code requirements in more detail. The Handbook is updated regularly to integrate relevant Human Rights subjects and set an approach to address and remediate specific challenges. All commitments mentioned before are granted throughout the supply chain, so that a supplier with whom PUMA has a direct contractual relationship (Tier 1 supplier) in turn bears the responsibility for ensuring compliance across their own supply chain.

PUMA also drives sustainability integration and performance in the business by linking the sustainability goals to staff bonuses. PUMA finalized its Responsible Sourcing Policy in May 2019. The Policy covers the commitment, purpose, scope, and intent of the Policy, in addition to the expectations for PUMA staff on responsibilities, dialogue, training, and performance from implementing reasonable sourcing practices. The responsibilities section outlines PUMA’s role in ensuring fair compensation, balanced production planning, and expectations of subcontractors, among other standards.

Risk Assessment and Due Diligence Processes

PUMA has actively promoted respect for Human Rights within its supply chains for over 20 years. All PUMA suppliers (Tier 1) as well as all PUMA Core Suppliers (Tier 2) are regularly assessed for compliance with our Code of Conduct. We recognize the risk of modern slavery within the textile and footwear industries. All forms of modern slavery, including forced labor, bonded labor, child labor and human trafficking are defined as Zero Tolerance Issues (ZTIs) as stated in PUMA’s Sustainability Handbook - Social Standards. New factories with ZTIs will not be admitted into PUMA’s supply chains. For active factories, the remediation of ZTIs is treated with the highest priority. Should a factory fail to remediate any identified ZTIs within an agreed timeframe, the business relationship with this factory will be terminated.

As part of our actions to identify and mitigate risks,
we carry out due diligence and assessments which include:

- Suppliers’ selection through a careful screening process to engage only with business partners who share our commitment to uphold the highest labor standards; Conducting regular announced and unannounced audits as well as third-party assessments from the Fair Labor Association (FLA) to better understand local contexts and leverage opportunities;
- Formal accreditation of PUMA’s vendor compliance program through the Fair Labor Association (latest accreditation in 2019);
- Partnering with the Better Work Program of the International Labor Organization in those countries where Better Work and PUMA are active (Bangladesh, Cambodia, Indonesia, Vietnam);
- Identification of regional specific Human Rights risks by engaging in an active dialogue with local stakeholders including NGOs, unions and suppliers;
- Setting up a direct hotline for supply chain workers to raise their concerns;
- Joining industry initiatives for mapping and remediating the most complex challenges; and
- Reporting annually progress towards our sustainability goals through our annual report.

We recognize that our most salient risks regarding modern slavery and human trafficking in our supply chain are in the lower tiers. Based on a risk mitigation approach, our core Tier 2 suppliers, who represent the majority of our business, have been included in our compliance program. For the other (non-core) Tier 2 suppliers, we require our Tier 1 suppliers to pass down our compliance requirements to their business partners. In 2017, we conducted a Supply Chain Human Rights Risk Assessment together with the specialist consultancy firm twentyfifty. The results showed that PUMA is proactively embedding responsible business conduct in its management processes as well as collaborating with other peers and industry initiatives. Mapping and assessing risk and impact practices in the lower Tiers of the supply chain were identified as opportunities for improvement to be better integrated at the strategic level.

The high-risk areas identified include the field of cotton farming as well as labor blind spots, for example, on the lower Tiers of leather tanning as well as marine shipping. Together with internal and external stakeholders an action plan was set up to mitigate the potential risks identified. We are currently sourcing our cotton from sustainable sources and have achieved our target of using 100% more sustainable cotton fabric at the end of 2020. We have required our suppliers to source only sustainable cotton, grown in farms which are licensed or certified as having good farming and human rights standards, or recycled cotton. In parallel, we work on improving the traceability of the leather we use via the traceability system of the Leather Working Group, more than 97% of the leather used in 2020 came from a certified tannery. To mitigate the risk of marine shipping, we work with top-class logistic companies and ask them to frequently update us on their own Human Rights policies and performance.

Thanks to our work with industry peers, we have also identified the high risk of Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking to which low-skilled migrant workers are exposed. In 2018, we updated our own policies to ensure that they adequately address responsible recruitment practices, including for example, that no recruitment fees should be borne by workers. PUMA has also signed the AAFA/FLA Apparel and Footwear Industry Commitment to Responsible Recruitment.
Effectiveness and Remediation

Embedding Human Rights across our operations and suppliers is a part of PUMA’s Sustainability Targets for 2020 and also for 2025. All PUMA employees who feel that ethical standards in business may have been compromised can raise their voice. Various channels are in place to report any suspicions and/or observations related to modern slavery. In practice, all employees could address their request regarding apparent failure to their line manager. They may also raise the matter with staff representatives, the legal department, the internal audit department or via a toll-free external whistleblower platform available worldwide. Our Ethics Committees make sure that no action is taken against an employee who, in all good faith, reports a case of failure to comply with an ethical principle of the Code of Ethics, as a consequence of having reported the matter. Our Code of Conduct applies to all our business partners in the supply chain. Our sustainability team enforces our Code requirements through regular audits every year in all our core factories to ensure that where PUMA products are being produced, these standards are met. PUMA has its own team of auditors and also works with designated third-party auditors, who are located around the world. During those audits, we look for indicators of forced labor as well as associated indicators of risk, such as the presence of migrant workers, excessive overtime or a lack of functioning worker representation.

In 2020, we continued to achieve nearly 100% compliance monitoring of our active Tier 1 manufacturing partners. Despite travel restrictions and partial lockdowns, in 2020 we were able to collect 490 audit reports from 406 factories. Seven factories could not sufficiently meet our requirements or didn’t show significant performance improvements. Consequently, these factories were delisted from our active supplier factory base.

During 2020, we identified and were able to remedy four zero-tolerance issues related to workers’ compensation below legal requirement and failure to renew business license.

Since any audit or assessment can only analyze the compliance situation at a given time, we also use other tools to manage and track the performance of our suppliers: PUMA Code of Conduct posters, including a worker hotline, PUMA Supplier Social Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) and digital tools for worker outreach. Through social media platforms we have established a communication channel with workers and furthermore selected core suppliers have adopted a formalized compliance and human resources app for their workers. Our PUMA Code of Conduct posters, which are displayed at all PUMA suppliers globally, include phone numbers and email addresses of our sustainability supply chain team to offer open channels for all employees of PUMA suppliers. In 2020, we received in total 94 worker complaints from our factories, 99.9% were resolved. None of these complaints concerned modern slavery issues. As PUMA is an accredited member of the Fair Labor Association, any third party can also file an official third-party complaint with the FLA directly. No issues concerning modern slavery or human trafficking in PUMA’s supply chains have ever been brought to the FLA complaint channel.

We engage with external organizations like Amander Kotha in Bangladesh and Microbenefits in China and Vietnam to optimize the effectiveness of the factory workers’ hotline.

We also received five third-party complaints from external organizations related to PUMA’s manufacturing partners. They focused on freedom of association, fair compensation, and discrimination. Four complaints were resolved by year end and the remaining complaint (received late in 2020), is in the process of being resolved.

When we became aware of a report by the Australian Strategic Policy Institute (ASPI) called “Uyghurs for Sale”; we saw this as an opportunity to further review our supply chains. Our research has indicated that the allegations concerning PUMA, as outlined in the report, are incorrect and that PUMA is in no way engaged in forced labor. PUMA has no direct or indirect business relationship with any manufacturer in Xinjiang, the native region of the Uyghurs in Western China. Therefore, we have not had to report such matters to any authorities. However, we have responded in writing to related enquiries from the British Parliament as well as from members of the European and German Parliaments.

We are aware of an increased human rights risk in various sourcing countries for the apparel and footwear industries. We have, for example, banned cotton from Uzbekistan and Turkmenistan from our supply chains due to human rights concerns.

As an ongoing process, we have engaged with our suppliers to map the facilities upstream of our supply chains, which also include the origin of raw materials. Our four largest sources of cotton are the USA, Australia, India and Brazil. Together they account for 92% of all cotton used in PUMA products. Of the 2% coming from China, to the best of our knowledge, none of the cotton originates from sourcing partners in Xinjiang.

Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking Statement 2020
To measure performance and progress within our supply chains, we use the results of our annual Social KPI survey including average payments vs. minimum wage payments, overtime hours, worker coverage by collective bargaining agreements, injury rate, turnover rate, insurance coverage, and other metrics. These data are reviewed by an independent third party. We continue to improve the methodology of data collection and analysis and have already been able to identify some potential risk areas such as collective bargaining in some countries in South and South-East Asia. Social KPIs and associated improvement programs help our suppliers to better monitor their own risk exposure, strengthening worker organization and management-worker dialogue that will ultimately help mitigate risks in the workplace. Beyond our assessments and checking procedures, we also establish lasting partnerships with our suppliers as well as core material and component manufacturers. This enables us to focus our support on core suppliers through offering training and development programs and sharing good practices. In 2020, we also engaged in regional one-on-one consultations with key organizations including Better Work Vietnam, Bangladesh and Indonesia, the Fair Labor Association, the Fair Wage Network, the International Organization for Migration, other brands, and critical suppliers to review our work plan on human rights, health, safety, and fair income for 2025. In 2020, we focused on keeping our suppliers in business and safeguarding workers’ health, employment, and income through several measures including: minimizing order cancellations; [0.35% of orders were cancelled, the orders that were cancelled were not yet in production and we provided compensation for raw material liabilities], extending our production lead times by 19% on average, expanding our PUMA Vendor Financing Program with an increase in supplier participation from 21% in 2019 to 30%, setting up three virtual meetings with our suppliers to share best practice and guidelines on social distancing, hygiene measures, and monitoring on-time and full payment to workers. To reach our goals, PUMA collaborates with other brands and international organizations in initiatives to work jointly on improving working conditions in our sourcing countries. One example of how we address the risks to which high-vulnerable groups are exposed, is our commitment to a project led by the FLA on Syrian Refugees working in the Turkish apparel industry. The FLA and the Ministry of Labor and Social Security in Turkey are raising awareness on the risk of child labor for refugees and provides guidance on the employment of young workers (older than 15 and younger than 18) to employers.

Training and Awareness

In 2020, 99% of PUMA employees (with an email-account) completed annual e-learning training on our Code of Ethics. Available in eleven languages, this training sets out the ethical ground rules in place and presents case studies and ethical dilemmas that help employees ask themselves the right questions. It is updated annually and covers all the major ethics principles upheld by PUMA’s Code of Ethics. Some of the topics covered include anti-corruption, diversity and respect for Human Rights.

At the supply chain level, we have conducted frequent supplier round tables in all major sourcing regions for several years, on different topics including PUMA’s Code of Ethics, potential forced-labor issues in the supply chain, particularly for migrant workers. Migrant workers are the group considered most exposed to significant risks of forced labor in supply chains. Material and component suppliers were also invited to these meetings. In 2020, we trained close to 700 of our PUMA supplier representatives at our virtual annual supplier Round Table Meetings.

We utilize a quiz after all trainings we conduct to evaluate the understanding of participants. We also collaborated with the FLA, the International Organization of Migration [IOM] and industry peers to assess labor conditions throughout the natural rubber supply chain in Vietnam. The primary objective is to understand supply chain structures, assess worker demographics, recruitment processes, and working conditions at the various tiers of the natural rubber supply chain. The project closure report will be published in 2021.
Next steps

PUMA will continue to implement the recommendations outlined in our Corporate and Supply Chain Risk Assessments.

In addition, we have commissioned a new risk assessment specific to Forced Labor in the supply chain, which will give us an updated external view on our progress made and potential improvement areas.

We will keep on improving and formalizing our ongoing risk management processes to better identify, prevent, mitigate and account for risks within our supply chains. We request core Tier 1 and Tier 2 suppliers to conduct due diligence on their own operations and supply chains.

PUMA will maintain its commitments at industry level, enabling a common framework for improving migrant workers protection through responsible recruitment practices. Furthermore, PUMA will ensure that our updated policy on recruitment fees is being addressed by our suppliers.

This statement covers January 1, 2020, to December 31, 2020, and has been approved by the Management Board of PUMA SE and for the purposes of the Australian Modern Slavery Act 2018, PUMA Australia.
